

Business woman's career advice to students

➔ Sadie Russell

sadie.russell@targetseries.co.uk

A LOUTH business woman has given help and advice to school pupils considering their career options.

Pam Collinson, director of Louth-based Totem Training, turned up for classes again at The Birkbeck School and Community Arts College, North Somercotes.

She spoke with three groups of year nine students as part of the Visit Schools And Colleges Campaign organised by The Education Business Partnership.

She said: "The whole idea was for me as a local business owner to pass on any helpful advice or guidance to the students as they choose their options, and that I was very happy to do."

The talk included a team exercise to start and was followed by a brief educational and career history of the choices that she has made over the years.

Pam ended her sessions by reading a short speech that Microsoft boss Bill Gates recently delivered to students at his old school.

For more information about The Education Business Partnership visit, the website www.irebp.org.uk or call Stella Morgan on 01522 574302.

Advice to students

A LOUTH business woman has given help and advice to school pupils considering their career options.

Pam Collinson, director of Louth-based Totem Training, turned up for classes again at The Birkbeck School and Community Arts College, North Somercotes, as part of the Visit Schools And Colleges Campaign organised by The Education Business Partnership.

She said: "The idea was for me as a local business owner to pass on any helpful advice or guidance to the students as they choose their options, and that I was very happy to do."

For more information about The Education Business Partnership, visit www.irebp.org.uk